Live Online Regional Forums via Policy Review TV

This annual forum is the principal UK event where the government, police authorities, local government, business associations and academics can address publicly the threats, strategies, collaborations and trends in serious and organised crime.

Those tackling organised crime, in both the public and private sector, are challenged by a period of fiscal constraint, alongside the reorganisation facing police forces; as well as the establishment of the new National Crime Agency.

The move away from "traditional" forms of commodity crime to more complex activities, including large scale fraud, means that this is no longer simply a matter for only the police.

Tackling organised crime requires the active participation of local government, communities and business, especially those involved in finance, ports and travel, and financial transactions.

Purpose of the Forum:

Serious and organised crime threatens the UK, damages its communities and subverts the economy. The scope and sophistication of organised crime requires a coordinated approach from all partners; including law enforcement, government agencies and the private sector.

This event provides the principal public event where the government, police authorities, local government, business associations and academics can set out threats and trends in serious and organised crime.

By participating in London, or at one of the regional satellite events, delegates will:

- Hear the latest Government policy on tackling serious and organised crime in the UK
- Set out strategies to plan workforce changes in a challenging environment at both a regional and national level
- Examine the likely trends in criminal activity and how police and law enforcement partners are responding
- Look ahead to major events and movements of people and manage the demands that will be placed on police and intelligence resources
- Update delegates on the strategies of the major organisations involved in the fight against serious and organised crime
- Hear what is being done locally to improve public awareness of organised crime: what it looks like, who is doing it and what the public can do to protect themselves and their communities
- Show the importance of engaging and managing the community and media co-operation in addressing new threats and patterns of crime and mobilising their co-operation and information sharing
- Examine the threat to neighbourhoods and communities and impacts on health, education and welfare
- Set out ways to address the legislative challenge to successful prosecutions
- Offer an unrivalled opportunity to network with colleagues working to combat serious and organised crime
